Thomas R. Watson, Esq. Completes Mediation Workshop at Harvard School of Law

Manchester, NH (March 2008) – Thomas R. Watson, a member of the regional law firm, Wiggin & Nourie, P.A., has recently completed an advanced mediation workshop presented by the Program on Negotiation at Harvard Law School. The workshop was limited to 45 participants and included attendees from 13 states and 11 countries.

Using a blend of theory and practice, the intensive four-day mediation workshop examined the various stages of the mediation process and gave participants the opportunity to engage in a number of simulations drawn from a range of settings, including commercial, family, neighborhood, and public policy disputes. Participants also examined critical mediation issues such as the ethical responsibility of the mediator, the role of law and lawyers in the process, and confidentiality and enforcement.

Watson is a member of Wiggin & Nourie, P.A.'s Litigation Group, Plaintiff Group and Corporate Group. In addition, Watson has developed a growing practice in providing mediation services in a variety of dispute areas.
